

Symbol / Company

1st Prize
$1,000,000

Welcome, Guest

HOME NEWS MARKETS EARNINGS INVESTING VIDEO CNBC TV CNBC 360 CNBC PRO
U.S. | ASIA-PACIFIC | EUROPE | ECONOMY | ENERGY | GREEN | TECHNOLOGY | BLOGS | WIRES | SLIDESHOWS | SPECIAL REPORTS | CORRECTIONS

Register Sign In

Delivering Alpha: Strategies for Global Investment Success A CNBC SPECIAL REPORT

American Economic Decline? Exaggerated

Published: Monday, 12 Sep 2011 | 4:29 PM ET

Text Size

By: Mark Koba
Senior Editor

Twitter 0

LinkedIn

Share

With a recent ratings downgrade, chronic unemployment, a growing budget deficit and a political system that seems determined to self-destruct, it might appear that the United States is losing its grip as the world's top economic power.

Tom Grill | Photographer's Choice | Getty Images

But analysts say that despite the laundry list of troubles—and predications of an American decline—the country is far from losing its ranking as the number one economy on the globe.

"The U.S. economy is the largest in the world, and the country has one of the highest average incomes in the world," says Matthew Rafferty, professor of economics in the Quinipiac

University School of Business. "There are few countries that are likely to rival the U.S. in the near future."

"I don't see U.S. power being eclipsed in the short term or even medium term," says Usha Haley, Professor of International Business at Massey University in Auckland, New Zealand. "The U.S. has problems of course, but the demise of the USA is much exaggerated."

What's keeping the U.S. afloat in a sea of economic woes, analysts say, is what's kept it upright in the past—innovation and the ability to produce.

"Silicon Valley is still the world leader in technology, and Wall Street is still the center of the financial world and of capitalism itself," says Charles Sizemore, CFA and editor of the Sizemore Investment Letter. "And we're manufacturing more today than we did in the 1970s. It's just with less labor."

Even in spite of a slowing economy, as shown in the gross domestic product (GDP), the United States is still ahead of other countries. Compared to the U.S., most of the major industrialized nations' percentage of GDP is less than half of America's.

GDP PERCENTAGE COMPARISON TO US GDP

Country	2000	2010
Brazil	6.51	14.32
China	12.11	40.31
India	4.65	11.86
Japan	47.15	37.70
Germany	19.20	22.70
Turkey	2.69	5.04

Sources: World Bank and Kamran Dadkhah

"The U.S. has a gigantic economy, even with a growth rate of slightly less than 3 percent," says Kamran Dadkhah, associate professor in economics at

TOP HEADLINES

» Markets | Economy | Companies

Two-Year Treasury May Hit 0%, S&P Fall Another 20%: Analyst (12)

- Italy Is Turning to China for Help in Its Debt Crisis (41)
- Fear Factor: Stock Market Hasn't Priced In All Bad News (20)
- Huge Market Swings Are Becoming a Fact of Life (31)
- Obama Plans to Raise Taxes to Pay for Jobs Program (158)
- Bank of America CEO Unveils Plan To Slash Billions (39)
- Health-Care Fraud Runs Wide And Deep (3)
- More Wall Street Job Cuts Are On the Way
- JP Morgan Chief: Global Bank Rules Are 'Anti-American' (44)
- Why Jamie Dimon Is Right About New Capital Rules (23)

LATEST FROM OUR BLOGS

» More

Time to Buy US Tech Stocks: Strategists

- Hale: 'Contagion' — Fact or Fiction?
- A Steal in Malibu at $22 Million
- Anniversary of 9/11 Leads To Boom For Oversized Flag Rental Business
- Morici: Greece Must Default, Dump the Euro (5)
- Farrell: Greek Crisis Begg US TARP-Type Solution (4)
- Busch: European Debt Crisis
- 'Friction' in Obama's Refi Proposal
- VW's Global Grand Plan Takes a Hit
- Chatman: Once a CEO, Always Act Like a CEO (2)

FEATURED SLIDESHOWS

» More

Toys That Failed
Will it burst into flames? Will a child choke on it? Is it just a bad idea? Here are 10 toys that failed.

NYC Fashion Week
Mercedes-Benz Fashion Week kicked off this week at New York's Lincoln Center.

September 11th Memorials
Many memorials have been built in tribute to victims of 9/11, take a look at some of the ones throughout the nation.

Northeastern University. "But that 3 percent increase in GDP is more than the entire GDP of many countries."

That's not to say that the U.S. shouldn't look over its shoulder. Many countries, specifically China, have long been gaining economic strength.

"China has had high growth rates for over 30 years," says Frank Lavin, CEO of Export Now and a former U.S. ambassador to Singapore. "Their ability to sustain those rates combined with the softness in the U.S. economy gives rise to speculation that China will surpass the U.S. and assume economic leadership on international issues."

With China's GDP rate at around 8-11 percent a year, and the U.S. stuck at around 2-3 percent, it's easy to see why some say China's economy will be larger than the U.S. economy by 2016.

China isn't the only growing economic force on the horizon, say experts.

"The largest change over the last 10 to 15 years has been the growth of emerging markets," says Thomas Root, associate professor in finance at Drake University. "The BRIC [% explain this] countries capture the headlines, but many smaller countries, like some in South America and Asia, are having an increase in production."

"The European Union and Germany in particular are the most formidable threats to the U.S.," Massey University's Haley adds. "They are big enough countries to be threats even as they struggle."

America's battle to get its own economy growing at a faster pace opens the door for others, analysts point out.

"Perhaps the most damning evidence [of potential American decline] is the unemployment rate of around 9 percent," explains Adrian Cronje, a partner and Chief Investment Officer at Balentine, a worldwide investment firm. "The question is whether large segments of the U.S. workforce are sufficiently skilled and productive to compete and drive future economic growth."

There's also the falling value of the dollar that could help knock the U.S. off its perch, Cronje argues.

"The U.S. dollar is in danger of losing its status as a safe haven for investors," Cronje says. "It's been in a long term bear market against hard assets like gold, and that decline reflects a decline in economic power."

If the U.S. did lose its number one position, that would have global implications, according to Northeastern University's Dadkhah.

"For the U.S., it would mean a lower standard of living and less power to influence international events," Dadkhah explains. "And America is the pole holding up the tent of international finance. If the pole falls, we'd have a period of uncertainty and upheaval on a worldwide scale."

But what currently ails the U.S. is also hitting the rest of the world, according to analysts. Nations that for now seem to be riding a faster economic track will have likely have troubles of their own, says Roger Scher, professor of International Political Economy at Seton Hall University.

"It's always trendy to speak about the decline of the U.S.," says Charles Sizemore. "I'm not sure it really matters that much. Other countries are beating us with faster growth but they're

"History has shown us that economic success stories turn sour," explains Scher. "Witness poorly-growing Brazil and Peru, and Europe's bust in recent years. And watch out for China's potential property price bubble. It's huge and brings considerable political risk."

As tempting as it may be to gloat over other countries' economic declines, analysts say the U.S. has plenty of work to do in order to remain a viable leader.

MOST SHARED

- Italy Turns to China for Help in Debt Crisis
- Obama Plans to End Tax Breaks to Pay for Jobs Program
- Stocks End Higher on Italy/China Bond Report
- Is Manufacturing Falling Off the Radar in the US?
- A Steal in Malibu at $22 Million
- Anniversary of 9/11 Leads To Boom For Oversized Flag Rental Business
- Stock Market Still Hasn't Priced in All the Bad News Yet
- Société Générale Solvent, Greece Exposure Limited: CEO
- How to Make Business Want to Invest Again
- Techcrunch, AOL and the Future of Media

MOST POPULAR

- News
- Blog Posts
- Videos

- Obama Plans To End Tax Breaks To Pay For Jobs Program
- Dow Could Crash To 3,000 In 2013: Author
- No Hiding Place From Crisis Bigger Than Lehman: Economist
- Bank Of America To Slash $5 Billion In Costs By 2013
- Implement VAT, Cut All Income Taxes To Create Jobs: Ross
- 'Only A Matter Of Time' Before Greek Default: Bove
- JP Morgan Chief Says Bank Rules 'Anti-US'
- Stocks End Higher On Italy/China Bond Report
- Global Stock Selloff To Continue On EU Debt Crisis: Experts
- Stocks Hit Hard By Euro Zone Fears

SPECIAL REPORTS

» More

9/11: Ten Years Later
Ten years later, we're arguably a sadder and more anxious nation, yet we're also ever-determined to remain resilient.

HOT ON FACEBOOK

Recommendations

Sign Up Create an account or log in to see what your friends are recommending.

-  Employers Say Jobs Plan Won't Lead to Hiring Spur
386 people recommend this.
-  World Entering 'Dangerous New Phase': Lagarde
554 people recommend this.
-  A Porn Bunker for the Apocalypse
185 people recommend this.
-  A 50-Year Bond? What One Fed Option Could Look Like
284 people recommend this.
- Stocks Skid 2% Amid Greece Default Worries
110 people recommend this.

Facebook social plugin growing economy is starting at a lower base."

manage for the uncertainty of fiscal and regulatory policy from Washington."

"We need long-term plans to cut the deficit and reduce entitlement and defense spending," says Roger Scher. "At the same time, we need to invest in education and infrastructure and cut tax loopholes."

In the end, say analysts, the U.S. should ultimately focus on its own economy and leave the question of who's number one to history.

"It's always trendy to speak about the decline of the U.S.," says Charles Sizemore. "I'm not sure it really matters that much. Other countries are beating us with faster growth, but they're starting at a lower base."

"Whether the U.S. is number one is questionable as a premise," says Till Schreiber, assistant professor of economics at the College of William & Mary.

"People should be concerned about their standard of living rather than size of economy," Schreiber goes on to say. "Indonesia has a larger economy than Switzerland but the Swiss are on average much richer. A union between the U.S. and Mexico would create a huge economy. But would that make Americans better off? No."

RELATED LINKS

© 2011 CNBC.com

TOPICS: South America | IMF | Employment | Recession | Debt | European Union | Europe | Russia | China | BRIC | Economy (Global) | Economy (U.S.)

Twitter 0 LinkedIn Share

Print Email

CNBC HIGHLIGHTS » More: Blogs | Quizzes | Slideshows | Special Reports | Video

No Comments have been posted.

ADD COMMENTS

Please Sign In or Register to participate.

Your Comments (Up to 1100 characters):

Please sign-in/optin or register to be able to submit comments.

Europe News Remaining characters: 1100 Economy Dow 30 Energy Commodities Green Currencies Preview Comment

EARNINGS News Calendar Surprises

Portfolio (Beta) Watchlist Stock Screener Fund Screener

U.S. Video Asia-Pacific Video Europe Video CEO Interviews

CNBC Europe CNBC World CNBC HD+ Channel Finder

MORE CNBC 360 CNBC Mobile Website RSS